

Children's Serial Story

THE TARGET OF FLAME.

(By Paul Holmes.)

CHAPTER ONE.

Field Hospital No. 124.

The boy looked at him idly.

His gaze swept the long hall-like room, lined on either side with small beds, each one bearing its own pillow and blanket. He looked at the door at the far end of the room opened. Four soldiers, in white uniforms of France,

entered, carrying on their stretchers

another victim

of the hideous

war.

The boy turned his eyes

away quickly.

He did not care

to see the sight

since he himself

had been brought in in such a way.

His mind dwelt upon that event for a moment. He had been wounded in the left leg, and he recalled the details of that battle. The order had come to advance, and as one, the French troops had responded, and then came the first volley from German guns. He had felt a sharp, piercing sting in his right shoulder, had fallen, and lost consciousness.

They had come long, feverish days and sleepless nights, when life had lost its charm, and in brief, fleeting moments of self-realization he had described only seemingly sweet repose of death.

But now all that was past.

His wound had healed and his strength had almost returned. He was impatient now, impatient for something other than the monotony of the hospital. He wanted to be out into the world again, and he was eager to enjoy the weeks' tiring of the doctor's hand, after he should be discharged from the hospital.

For the last few days he had been permitted to don his uniform and to stroll about the grounds outside the gray chateau for an hour or two in the afternoon. It could not be long now before he would be permitted to leave this place. The monotony of hospital life outweighed the danger of rather take his place on the firing line than endure the confinement of a field hospital. The boy looked at the doctor, and then at the hands pointed at seven o'clock. That was good.

The doctor would visit him in a few moments, and in an hour's time he would be discharged. His discharge was the door again.

It was nearly time for the doctor, and his visits always served to vary the dismal sameness of the day. As he approached the door, he opened.

The familiar form of the doctor appeared, followed by an officer in uniform. They walked swiftly down the aisle and the boy felt his heart throb with interest. What was his business here?

Then the two halted before his cot and the doctor addressed him directly. "I have the treatment you need, M. L'Verne," he asked.

The boy answered, "My shoulder, sir."

As good as ever, and I am anxious to be discharged again."

The doctor turned to the officer.

"This is Private Francois L'Verne, whom you wanted to see," he informed him.

Pleased to meet you, M. L'Verne," the officer exclaimed, extending his hand. L'Verne gripped it heartily. "I have some slight business to talk over with you," he went on. "I am

The matter of procedure is left entirely in your hands."

"Do you think about it?" demanded Depaure, as soon as the reading was finished.

"My opinion is that there is quite a task before you," the captain remarked.

"I am aware of that fact. As captain of my staff, I want you to listen to the plan of attack I have laid out, and offer any suggestions as you may see fit. We will send a number of troops to attack the trenches on Chevris hill. I am informed that they are not fortified strongly. This movement would probably lead to a concentration of German troops near this hill. Then our men will make a quick night march to the hill overlooking Rolleaux, and with our artillery, strongly entrenched there, we should be able to take the town. If most of the troops leave Chevris hill shortly after sundown we should be in place by eleven o'clock. Then the night bombardment ought to clear the whole town of Rolleaux from Germans. The colonel paused reflectively. "That is my plan," he said.

"What do you think of it?"

Replying, "It sounds well," he admitted at last. Then he asked, "Who will provide a target for the artillery?"

"Surely the Germans will have a hard time to find the range on a dark night, having never seen the country before."

Depaure had thought of that. He said slowly, "There is a French spy serving in the German army with him he could fire some church spire, the light of which would provide a target."

"Fine," cried the captain approvingly. "But how will word be given to that?" the colonel muttered, "Is what I don't know."

For a time both men were silent.

D'Amilly spoke first.

"Could not an aeroplane carry this message?" he ventured.

"If there was some way by which it could communicate with the spy,

yes," answered Depaure.

"But there is a way," D'Amilly exclaimed. "An expert marksman will be sent in the plane, and he will have the orders, written in code, concealed in an ordinary rifle dart. Sure, the order written on this paper, would not take up much room. He could then shoot the dart at the very foot of the spy."

"That would work, sir!" the colonel cried admiringly. "Only there is a certain risk, with a blazed trunk under the roots of which all orders the spy from this tree every day. If he is a marksman, so expert that he could shoot a dart into this tree from an aeroplane could be secured, then the problem is solved. Do you know

such a man?"

"No," D'Amilly replied.

And Colonel Depaure, try as he did,

could not admit that he didn't either.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

We shall do so much in the years to come,
But what have we done today?
We shall give our gold in a princely sum,
But what did we give today?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
But what did we do today?
We shall plant a hope in the place of fear,
But what did we do today?
We shall speak the words of love and cheer,
But what did we do today?
We shall be so kind in the afterwhile,
But what have we been today?
We shall bring each lonely life a smile,
But what have we done today?

We shall reap such joys in the by and by,
But what have we sown today?
We shall build our mansions in the sky,
But what have we done today?
We shall in idle dreams to seek,
But here and now do we do our task?
Yes, this is the thing our souls must ask.

"What have we done today?"
—"In Merry Mood,"
This little poem is so intensely personal that it appeals to every thoughtful mind with broad significance. The most of us are as busy as bees, and the daily round of toil is so monotonous, that the first thing which comes to the question, "What have I done today?" would be, "The same things which I have been doing every other day, and am likely to be doing to the end of the chapter."

The daily grind is often wearing, and we are sometimes inclined to think that our own particular channel of toil is the worst in the long list which makes up the daily program, but this is not true. Work is work, whether we find it, and every line has its advantages, as well as its drawbacks. The machine has taken the place of the hand, to such large extent, that in many industries the man becomes a part of the machine, and so the expert machinist is today a prominent figure in New York to this country, and landed a job as a hod carrier, and then wrote his cousin Mike to come over. He said: "This is a great country, Mike. All we have to do is to put the brick in a little box and carry them up to the top of the building and the man up there does all the work." An old chestnut with plenty of whiskers, but it tells the story of advancement, for today the material is whisked away to the top of the building by machinery.

There are all kinds of trades where men find employment. Some of them are reasonable where the work of a year is crowded into six or eight months, and where the daily wage is higher than in other lines where the life time is represented by the holidays. And the yearly income does not vary much, and the man who is busy all the time should be the happiest, and always is if in love with his work.

The great army of workers, in the industrial world is composed of men and women who have no financial rating in Dunn or Bradstreet. No demand is made on them once a year for a statement of assets and liabilities, and yet the great majority of them are honest, and local credit is readily extended.

While the business world is noted for failures, in spite of all that is done to protect credit, the word failure is not known in the industrial world. The man who is skillful, in any line of work is a successful man, and while not always satisfied, he is infinitely better off than many men in business who are struggling against odds to maintain a foothold.

The work of the world, especially in this country, is fairly evenly divided. The good Lord in planning destiny provided the average man with an average brain, capable of mastering one line of work, and becoming an expert performer, if he will.

The man in business, if successful, devotes his time and energy to the development of the one line in which he is familiar. About dry goods man knows nothing about hardware and the grocery man would not attempt to run a drug store.

The same principle applies in the industries. The expert in every line is the man who applies himself to the work in hand. If he is a good carpenter he don't pretend to know all about masonry or painting. The "Jack of all trades" is always a tinker with a limited income. The industrial field calls for the investment of both brain and muscle, and is free from many financial responsibilities.

The writer was privileged to spend an hour, the other evening, at a home where the golden wedding anniversary was being celebrated. It was a modest home for two, for the children which came along through the early years, have long been scattered. The rooms were filled with flowering plants and blossoms, whose silent voices were pleasant reminders of the love and esteem of friends and associates, and the letters and telegrams of congratulation, cheered the hearts of the old sojourners.

The bride of fifty years ago was a frail little woman and the kindly face was traced with the marks of time, but it lighted up with an old time smile, for the heart was still young, and the memories which harked back through the long journey, were sacred memories.

Time had dealt more kindly with the groom, and in full dress suit he looked the part of well preserved age while living on borrowed time. As we chatted he said, "I don't spend much time in the past, for the present seems so much more important, and yet I have been living over today some early experiences."

"On the fateful day I had in my pocket eighty dollars of borrowed money for our wedding trip. After paying the preacher ten dollars the liveliest man in the rain, and the necessary expenses of a short honeymoon trip, we found that we had eleven dollars left with which to commence housekeeping, but we commenced and have been going strong ever since."

"This was at the close of the war when gold was worth two dollars and seventeen cents a piece. How we things else in proportion. How we lived I don't know, but we lived and as the children came along there always seemed to be a place for them."

"After we had been married three or four years we decided that we ought to be saving some money so we commenced to put away in a little box which we kept under the bed. At the end of the year we had eighty-five dollars in this kind of chicken feed. Then I bought a gun, which came near causing a rupture in the family, but we survived and soon had duck feathers enough to supply the house with pillows which we very much needed."

"Those were great years, the first few years of our married life. We came to know each other and sentiment, which is short-lived, gave place to friendship and comradeship, and as the years sped by we learned to live by the day, attempting to get out of life all the wholesome pleasure it contained, and so we have come down to the last lap of the journey, cheered by many pleasant memories."

"Then he handed me the little poem, which introduces this story, and said, 'I ran across this the other day and saved it for you, thinking that the choice sentiment expressed might please you as it did me, for you know we all have ideals. The thing which has always bothered me is not being able to live up to the ideal.'"

"You know that my theology is very homely and very simple. I have come to believe that the highest order of service is serving humanity. That the future, of which we know so little, will take care of itself, in God's good time, and that no crown of glory will await us unless we win it here and now. So the question, 'What have you done today?' comes to me with marked significance."

"I said 'good night' to the happy old couple, who have trudged along the pathway together for fifty years, and went home in thoughtful mood. It occurred to me that while the old man's theology might not be up to standard, that it was not difficult to comprehend."

There is so much to be done every day, and so many hearts waiting for the human touch, which is the Divine touch, that there is room for all kinds of workers in this field which is always white and ready for the harvest.

Impossible. Once upon a time a person made a famous remark that nothing is impossible. Here are some things that person never tried to do. He never tried to convince his wife that he didn't need a new hat. He never tried to cut a pane of glass with a 10-cent glass cutter. He never tried to unscrew the top from a glass fruit jar with his bare hands. He never tried to look dignified in a celluloid collar. He never tried to hook his wife's dress up in the back in a hurry. He never tried to make league baseball pay in a town where grass grows in the middle of the street.

A Wedding. A reader has sent in the following poetic account of a wedding he ran across somewhere:

For a "bride-to-be" I try again,
In behalf of "Careful Gleaner" friends,
To pen their love and respect in rhyme
And read at this time.

It's a pleasure to have the privilege to write
And you work together has been a delight.
As Victor's church organist the past three years she served,
And for promptness and faithfulness much credit deserves.

You all know this shower is for Miss Rosa Dodd,
Who most of you all her life have saved.
Her home is here in Wall Town,
Where she was born and to womanhood grown.

Her beautiful Christian character to all is known,
But, of course, most noted in her home,
Where the loss will be felt by father and mother
And Tommie and Albert, her brothers.
The lucky fellow is Berlie Allgood.
He's lived in our midst five years, all know him or should.
He is a gentleman refined and true,
Will make a good husband, I think, don't you?

It's so nice they won't move far away.
We can often our visits pay,
And live them with us in church work,
Which we know they'll willing do without shirk.

THINK O' THAT.

They were talking about wonderful parrots when Colonel Harta pulled a chair up to the little circle, plying between Cape Spuds and the Malay sea with cargoes of typewriters and mouth organs. Bezzers was saying, "I had a parrot aboard that could whistle 'Home Sweet Home' so beautifully, so touchingly, that the tears would positively run down our faces."

"When I was a kid I owned a young Wullop. We had a parrot home that could imitate a cat fight so faithfully that we all used to stand around and roar with laughter till we had to leave the room for fear of doing ourselves an injury."

"Remarkable!" said Colonel Harta. "But let me tell you, gentlemen, of the parrot that kept for company in my lonely tent while I was sharing fifty birds for the Perkins Institute in southern Peru. That bird, gentlemen, was named 'The Jolly Blacksmith' so, perching on the top of my tent, sparks flying from his blooming tail!"

There was a strained silence, after which young Wullop bought drinks for everybody but the colonel.

Temperance Talks

(By Temperance Educational League)
"Beer as Liquid Bread."
Some people think beer is a harmless drink. It is being advertised as "Liquid Bread," and certain liquor interests would have you believe it a wonderful beverage. Let us look at the facts. We have before us the statement of Winfield Scott Hall, M. D., professor of physiology at Northwestern University medical school, Chicago. It shows that the average American beer contains about 5.64 per cent of alcohol and 4.27 per cent of carbohydrates, the latter being represented by sugar and dextrin. A quart of beer would contain less than one and one-half ounces of sugar and dextrin which on the market would cost less than half a cent. From this analysis it would appear that the man who drinks four glasses of beer receives less than one-half cent worth of nutrition and takes into his system nearly two ounces of narcotic poison.

Now, Mr. Drinkingman, we want to call your attention to three things. The first is that anyone who tells you that beer is the equivalent of bread or any nutritious substance is trying to deceive you. He would have you believe the moon is made of green cheese or any thing that he thinks will cause you to buy his beer. Most self-respecting men do not like the idea of being the victim of deception and yet that is precisely what the liquor trade would have you be, viz: a dupe.

The second thing to which we call your attention is the fact that every time you spend your money for beer as a nutritious, body building substance you are badly cheated. The same amount of money spent for bread, eggs, meat or even potatoes at present high prices will buy from fifteen to forty times as much nutritious food as will be obtained in the purchase of beer. If you are looking for bargains in food do not buy beer unless you enjoy the experience of being cheated.

The other thing we would have you think about when you drink your glass of beer for its food value is the amount of LAROCIC poison you take into your system and that means poor health, a dulled intellect, incapacity for work, poverty and general depravity.

OFFICIALS AT SEA FOR CRIME MOTIVE

CITY AND COUNTY AUTHORITIES COMPLETELY BAFFLED AS TO REASON FOR MURDER OF PALMERO.

SEE STRANGE ITALIANS

Three Reported in City Thursday Afternoon—Met and Argued Near Five Points Crossing.

More tangible than ever before with each new but meager development the murder of James Palmero today presents to the Janesville police department, the sheriff's office and to District Attorney Stanley G. Dunwiddie the most profound mystery perhaps in the history of the county. The cause for the crime, presenting themselves one after another the county and city officials are wholly at sea, utterly unable to sift out and decide upon either one or other as to the reasons for the riddling of Palmero's body with bullets.

All Speculation.

Today, thirty-six hours after the murder, but few facts had presented themselves over those which had been obtained at midnight Thursday and from this accumulation only guess-work and confusion results.

Perhaps the newest development and that lead which may be expected to give a real clue upon which to work and one which is being attacked from every angle is the fact which reached the police station that three strange Italians were in the city Thursday afternoon.

They met at the Five Points about three o'clock that afternoon and engaged in noisy conversation with much argument evident and with a pronounced motioning with their hands. They were dressed by a Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway case, and one of the road employees, a close friend to the murdered Palmero and other Italian, who he noticed at once the strangers, one a big and powerful built man and the other two somewhat smaller.

Another incident relative to this meeting of the strangers and which the police are adverse to publication seems to strengthen one of the six causes which may have led up to the shooting.

The presence of the strange Italians here gives the aspect that the job was done by imported gunmen. This is in contradistinction to the belief of Chief of Police Champion whose contention is that it was a local job and that Janesville Italians who have been questioned know a great deal more than they will tell when asked, not that they would do so and escape with their own life.

Fear of the dreaded Mafia, the "Black Hand," the police believe sealed the lips of those who were even the slightest knowledge which would eventually, through proper police work, lead to the apprehension of the murderers and bring them to justice.

Dunwiddie's Opinion.

Against the belief of the police that the shooting was done by Italians who live here, District Attorney Dunwiddie this morning expressed the opinion that it was the work of outside criminals.

"Of course, this is only guesswork," said Mr. Dunwiddie, "but the case is tangible and so many different leads can do is to guess. There is little information to be obtained by us from the Italians, even those who were most intimate with Palmero. They'll tell you 'Yes, I was a good friend of Raffie's. I don't know if he ever had any trouble anywhere else. I don't know anything about his fairing in his own business.' They keep a questioner going in a circle. That the cause may have been something that Palmero had done years ago and even before he came here. He might have had some enemy who had been after him for years."

May Have Had Enemy.

"Palmero, despite the stories we have heard about him, was a square with us. About two years ago he brought down to us an Italian who had stabbed another in one of the bunkhouses. On another occasion he had an Italian arrested for carrying a razor on him. Gardner Kavelage, the district attorney, got him off with a fine.

"We are confronted with one of the hardest cases to solve in the world. We are working hard however, and are doing everything and following up every angle which has presented itself. The work is slow but there is a great deal of it to do."

"What the district attorney calls a 'steenth hand' story is being investigated and Beloit now presents much in the case. Down at Janesville a local man heard someone say that he heard someone else tell that a Beloit woman was reported to have told that an Italian she knew pocketed his revolver late Thursday afternoon. With the remark that he was going up to Janesville to raise hell. Although little stock is taken in the report nevertheless it is being run down for possible developments."

Find Revolver Shells.

Police officers who searched the ground at the scene of the crime yesterday morning were unable to find any revolver shells either loaded or empty. Chief Champion, however, went over the ground again. He discovered six empty .38 calibre shells and one which had failed to explode. The mark of the hammer could be plainly seen.

The fact that the murderers "broke" their guns and emptied the .38 shells is causing wonderment. This, Chief Champion says, strengthens the belief that the shooting was done by local Italians.

The police chief has learned further that Raffie had borrowed much money lately from other Italians. Why they and nobody, not even his wife, seems to know, at least they say they don't.

Mrs. Palmero continues to bear up well under the strain but even the most expert questioning has failed to get forth from her any slip of tongue or direct statement to develop a lead. She professes not to know from whom her husband secured the money and what he did with it. She reiterates "He lent lots of money from men and then he no pay."

Release Suspects.

Frank Palmero, brother of the murdered man, and Angelo Cantante, the men who were with Raffie at the party at the Goliok house the night he died and who were kept at the police station, have been released. Likewise, Ed. Restibo and his son, Tom, arrested at their house across Pearl street from Goliok's and held at the county jail, were ordered freed by county jail. The men were taken as suspects, but the police and the district attorney are now certain that the four suspects had nothing to do with the crime.

One suspect in Body.

The autopsy conducted by Drs. W. H. Palmer and W. H. McGuire yesterday disclosed but one bullet wound. This passed entirely through the body. This was the .38 calibre bullet reported by the Gazette to have been found. Bullets from the trunk of the car from either side pierced the heart, practically tearing it to shreds. The brain was pierced by three shots, and the shot which entered the neck below the right ear broke Palmero's neck. It was firmly established.

Coroner D. Frank Ryan this afternoon awaited the appearance of Italian witnesses to the shooting. His decision as to the time of the funeral. Some wanted it tomorrow, others Monday. It was expected though that the Sabbath would be the day selected. The services are to be held in the Ryan mortuary parlors.

Friends View Body.

Throughout today and yesterday afternoon many countrymen visited the undertaking rooms to view the body. All evidenced much interest and were anxious to the extreme to see where the bullets entered and left the body. Close listening and watching failed to bring forth any evidence to indicate that any one of the noisily talking knew anything about the crime.

General opinion about the city is that the mystery never will be solved. Every man has his views and back of it all is the fact that the police and county officials fail to get the assassins, it seems that they will not be held in the line of duty. The services are to be held in the Ryan mortuary parlors.

CHEESE FACTORY WANTS MORE MILK

Officers of Producers' Association Wish Farmers to Communicate at Once—Open Nov. 1st.

With the work of equipping the new cheese factory which is to be opened November 1st in the Ryan warehouse on Center street by the Leas River Creamery company, which will bring the dairy industry up to about twenty thousand pounds, the product of a thousand cows. The milk committee of the producers' association is most desirous of hearing from all farmers in this vicinity who would like to bring their milk to this city. They ask that all such producers communicate with the dairy committee at the city engineer's office, or if this is impossible, by letter. Information is desired regarding the exact number of cows, the kind of stock, the disposal of a milk concern operating a plant in this city.

Even though the cheese factory will handle a large quantity of milk, the dairy industry is still in need of more secure opportunities in Janesville for the establishment of various kinds of milk bottling or condensing works. Men who know the situation around here and there is no around here 100,000 pounds of milk cannot be brought to this city daily; this is done in Monroe and it is maintained that the dairy interest around Janesville are large as in that section of the country.

At present there is a large firm, one of the wealthiest in the west, which is looking for a suitable building with room for a plant. Officers of the producers' association are constantly receiving communications from farmers in this vicinity who are interested in which want to bring their milk to this city.

The introduction of a large national firm to plants operated by large national firms would mean a financial advance for the dairy industry. With milk selling at $2.00 a hundred the sale of 50,000 pounds per day to concerns here would mean that $1,000 would be put into circulation every day.

To Make Greek Cheese.

The new cheese company will manufacture Greek cheese, for which there is tremendous demand created by the large number of Greeks in this country. The war has stopped all importation of this cheese from Greece, and authorities declare that Greece cheese is in no country except to export cheese here. In the last three years after the war closes. By this time the American industry will be well established. There are at present only two concerns in the United States manufacturing this type of cheese, and of these Bays Brothers are the most successful.

Greek cheese is a very light, mild cheese, of the consistency of cream cheese. It is packed in kegs and barrels. Only last week a representative of a large importing house in New York city contracted with the Bays Brothers to take $5,000 worth of cheese each month for the next twelve months. In addition to this line of work, it is probable that the concern will ship pasteurized milk in the summer months, after the plan they are firmly established in the market. They take care of larger quantities of milk. The plant will open on November 1st, as planned, but before that time it is desirable that others of the dairy industry should have at their command a large quantity of milk. The prices paid are those set by the association, in accordance with the prevailing prices: November, $2.10; December, $2.10; January, $2.05; February, $2.00; March, $1.85.

GOOD VAUDEVILLE BILL AT THE MYERS

Onette, "The Whirling Dervish," is the first act on the bill at the New Myers Theatre this week. Onette does some rapid whirling, enough so that it makes one dizzy to watch her whirl. A very good act of its kind, a novelty.

"Victor," who is billed as "A Little Bit of Everything," doesn't do very much of anything except to appear as a particularly rugged tramp and deliver some music on three different instruments. His ukulele solo was by far the best part of his act and received considerable applause.

"The Soul Savers," played by Margaret Hiss & Company, proved to be a little sketch, overdone in parts and underdone in others. They received some applause and produced a few laughs.

Two very funny fellows are Anderson & Goines in their act "The Ghost of a Coon." Lough fellows, laugh throughout the act. It is full of pep and will make a hit with any audience. Dave Woods' Animal Actors, consisting of fifteen dogs and two monkeys, present an act that is unique. The picture act on the bill. Those little animals show scenes from everyday life and go through their antics on the stage without any visible direction. If they are coached from the wings, it does not in any way detract from the effect. This act is one of the kind that children delight in, yet is so cleverly arranged as to be enjoyable to the adults.

NEW MYERS THEATRE.

Hyams & McIntyre in "My Home Town Girl."

Perhaps the widest popularity of any two comedians of musical comedy by reason of their striking success in "The Girl of My Dreams," Hyams and McIntyre are adding to their laurels this season in their time-ful and witty new vehicle "My Home Town Girl." The book and lyrics are by Frank Stammers who, in his entire career could not have written a piece more perfectly suited to John Hyams and Leila McIntyre in their own peculiar style of entertaining.

"My Home Town Girl," which is produced by Perry J. Kelly, will be seen at the New Myers Theatre, Monday afternoon and evening. A costly scenery of the latest pattern and beautiful gowns and costumes of ultra-modern creation add to the attractiveness of the piece, while Mr. Kelly has surrounded his two stars with a cast of well known performers and a bevy of pretty girls who sing and dance to the hitting tunes of Louis A. Hirsch, composer of the music. The company carries its own symphony orchestra.

NAVIES OF THE WORLD TO BE SEEN IN ACTION.

The announcement of the coming of Bryant's Travelogues at the New Myers Opera house has created much excitement in local circles, as it is the first performance of its kind to be staged in this city. The feature of this performance is the lecture of Jack Bryant, a former gunnery sergeant in the United States marines, who has served in marines for six years, during which time he has circled the globe—having seen every part of the world in action. He saw the marines enter Vera Cruz in 1911. He is the hero of several smaller campaigns in Central American revolutions, having served in battles and engagements at Nicaragua, Haiti and

BIG SHOW COMES TO MILWAUKEE

Richard Carle, Valli Valli and Charles Winninger in "The Cohan Revue 1916"

The Cohan Revue 1916 will be the first big musical novelty of the season and will occupy the stage of the Davidson Theatre, Milwaukee, for a week's engagement, commencing Sunday night, the 29th, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The engagement is of special interest to the teachers of the state as it will occupy the Davidson during their convention in Milwaukee.

Cohan and Harris, who present this pretentious offering, adroitly and humorously introduce it as "A Musical Crazy-Quilt Patched together, Threaded with Words and Music and Staged by George M. Cohan." The prolific George has taken several of the season's most successful plays and woven them into an entertainment, that is said to be the snappiest, speediest and liveliest musical

Santa Domingo. He was awarded medals for sharp shooting with rifles and large naval guns. When the Wisconsin troops were called out for service at the border, Mr. Bryant immediately formed a volunteer company of ex-served men and drilled them at the Auditorium in Milwaukee. Carl Schaefer, an ex-German government aero corps officer, who was in charge of the Baden Zeppelin station in Germany for a number of years, will give an illustrated lecture on life in the German service. Gunner Wade McLaren, who is now in the United States navy, will give an illustrated lecture on "Naval Life" at this performance. Ernest Otto Semerau, a celebrated baritone, who is director from the Royal Academy of Music of Berlin, Germany, will sing American patriotic song hits. The clearest pictures will be shown in connection with each lecture, showing battleships firing shells, submarines firing torpedoes—battleships and submarines of nearly every navy in the world in action. Many persons have read about firing torpedoes, but very few have had the opportunity to see them fired, so this performance will prove very instructing as well as entertaining. Another feature of this performance is the fact that United States marines now in the service will act as ushers and distribute beautifully colored booklets of foreign and naval scenes. Any person who has served in the United States army, navy or marines, who will put on his uniform on that day, will be admitted free. In various downtown windows will be exhibited naval and marine equipment, among which is a Nicaraguan quick firing gun, which was captured in Nicaragua while under fire by Mr. Bryant and other marines.

The Idyl of Twin Fires

By WALTER
PRICHARD
EATON

Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Co.
Another instant, and she stood away from me, one hand over her mouth, and light in her eyes. Then, as suddenly, she laughed. It was hardly a nervous laugh. It welled up with the familiar gurgle from her throat.

"John Upton," she said, "you are a bad man. That wasn't what the thrush said at all."

"I misunderstood," said I, recovering more slowly, and astounded by her mood.

"I'll not reproach you, since I, a philologist, misunderstood for a second myself," she responded. "Hark!"

There was a sudden sound of steps and crackling twigs in the grove behind us, and Buster emerged up the path, hot on our scent. He made a dash with his tongue at my hand, and then fell upon Miss Goodwin. She sank to her knees and began to caress him, very quickly, so that I could not see her face.

"Stella," said I, "Buster has made a friend of you. That's always a great compliment from a dog."

She kept her face buried in his neck an instant longer, and then her eyes lifted to mine. "Yes—John," she said. "And now I must go home to pack my trunk."

"Let me drive you to the station in the morning," said I, as we emerged from the grove, in this sudden strange, calm intimacy, when no word had been spoken, and I, at least, was quite in the dark as to her feelings.

She shook her head. "No, I go too early for you. You—you mustn't try to see me."

For just a second her voice wavered. She stopped for a last look at Twin Fires. "Nice house, nice garden, nice brook," she said, and added, with a little smile, "nice rose trellis." Then she walked up the road, and at Bert's door she put out her hand.

"Good-by," she said.

"Good-by," I answered.

Her eyes looked frankly into mine. There was nothing there but smiling friendship. The fingers did not tremble in my grasp.

"I shall write," said I, controlling my voice with difficulty, "and send you pictures of the garden."

"Yes, do."

She was gone. I walked slowly back to my dwelling. I had kept my resolution. Yet how strangely I had kept it! What did it mean? Had I been strong? No. Had she made me keep it? Who could say? All had been so sudden—the kiss, her springing away, her abrupt, astonishing laughter. But she had not reproached me, she had not been righteously angry, nor, still less, absurd. She had thought it, perhaps, but the mood of the place and hour, and understood. That was fine, generous! Few women, I thought, would be capable of it. Stella! How pleasant it had been to say the name! Then the memory of her kiss came over me like a wave, and my supper stood neglected, and all that evening I sat staring idly at my manuscripts and stroking Buster's head.

Yes, I had kept my resolution—and felt like a fool, a happy, hopeless fool!

CHAPTER XII.

I Go to New York.

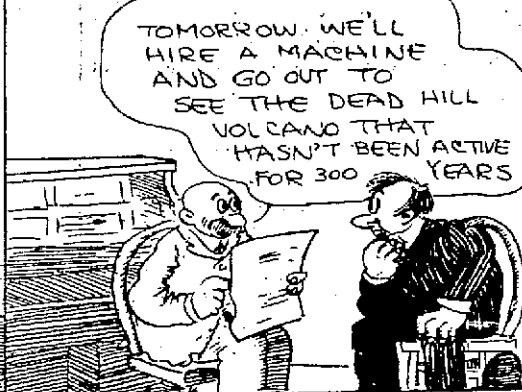

I shall not here recount the events on the farm during the weeks which followed Miss Stella's departure. They did not particularly interest me. My whole psychological make-up had been violently shaken, the centers of attention had been shifted, and I was constantly struggling for a readjustment which did not come. The post office appealed to me more than the peas, and I labored harder over my photographs of the sundial beds than over the beds themselves. I sent for a ray filter and a wide-angle lens, spending hours in experiment and covering a plank in front of the south door with printing frames.

I had written to her the day after she had departed, but no reply came for a week, and then only a brief little note, telling me it was not in town and conveying her regards to the roses. I, too, waited a week—though it was hard—and then answered, sending some photographs, one of them a snapshot of a bird on the edge of the bath, one of them of Buster sitting on his hind legs. Again she answered briefly, merrily, conveying her especial regards to Buster, but ending with a plaintive little postscript about the heat.

A few days later a box came addressed to Buster in my care. I opened it in Buster's presence, indeed literally beneath his nose. On top was a small package, tied with blue ribbon, and labeled "For Buster." It proved to be a dog biscuit, which the recipient at once took to the hearth and began upon. Beneath this was a note, which I opened with eager fingers. It began:

Dearest Buster: Your waggish epistle received and contents noted. The limits of the canine intelligence are probably responsible for your mistake in ascribing the term "glumness" to what you observe in Master John, when it is really lack of occupation. You see, dear Buster, he got Twin Fires so far under his thumb that he doesn't want to let the time, so to speak, go by at his writing of stories made up of big dictionary words which I am defining or inventing for him down here in a very hot, dirty, dusty, smelly town. Tell him that's all the trouble. He has a reaction from his first farming enthusiasm, and doesn't realize that the thing to do is to go to work on the new line, his line. For it is his line, you know, Buster.

IT IS DANGEROUS TO PRESENT A LETTER OF INTRODUCTION.

Underneath this you'll find something to give him, with my best wishes for sunshine on the dear garden. I'd kiss you, Buster, only dogs are terribly germy.

STELLA.

P. S.—That is a nice pool, isn't it?

I sat on the floor with the letter in my lap, smiling happily over it. Then I took the last package out of the box. It was heavy, evidently metal. Removing the papers, I held in my hand an old bronze sundial plate, a round one to fit my column, and upon it, freshly engraved, the ancient motto: HORAS NON NUMERO NISI SERENAS.

My first thought was of its cost. She couldn't afford it, the silly, generous girl! She'd bought it, doubtless, at one of those expensive New York antique shops, and then taken it to an engraver, for further expense. I ought not to accept it. Yet how could I refuse? I couldn't. I hugged it to my heart, and fairly ran to the dial post, Buster at my heels. Yes, I had no longer any doubts. I wanted her. I should always want her. Twin Fires was always with her.

Her Eyes Looked Frankly Into Mine.

complete. I was incomplete, life was incomplete, without her.

At six I stopped work, amazed to find the plot of a story in my head. Heaven knows how it got there, but there it was, almost as full-statured as Minerva when she sprang from the head of Jove, though considerably less genial. I even had the opening sentence all ready framed—to me always the most difficult point of story or essay, except the closing sentence. Nor did this tale appear to be one I had incubated in the past, and which now popped up above the "threshold" from my subconsciousness. It was a brand-new plot, a perfect stranger to me. The phenomenon interested me almost as much as the plot. The tale grew even clearer as I took my bath, and haunted me during supper, so that I was peremptory in my replies to poor Mrs. Pillig and refused to aid Peter that evening with his geography.

"Tomorrow," said I, vaguely, going into my study and locking the door. I worked all that evening, got up at midnight to force for a glass of milk and a fresh supply of oil for my lamp, and returned to my desk to work till four, when the sun astonished me. The story was done. Instead of going to bed, I went down in the cool of the young morning, when only the birds were astir, and took my bath in Stella's pool. Then I went to the dew-drenched peas vines and began to pick peas.

Here Mike found me, with nearly half a bushel gathered, when he appeared early to pick for market.

"It's the early bird gets the peas," said I.

"It is surely," he laughed. "You might say you had a telephone call to get up—only these ain't telephones."

"Mike!" I cried, "a pun before breakfast!"

"Shure, I've had me breakfast," said he.

Which reminded me that I hadn't. I went in the house to get it, reading over and correcting my manuscript as I ate. After breakfast I put on respectable clothes, tucked the manuscript in my pocket, and mounted the seat of my farm wagon, beside Mike. Behind us were almost two bushels of peas and several bunches of tall, juicy, red rhubarb stalks from the old hills—we found on the place. Mike had greatly enriched the soil, and grown the plants in barrels.

"Well, I'm a real farmer now," said I.

"Ye are, shurely," Mike replied.

"Them's good peas, if they was planted late."

We drove past the golf links and the summer hotel, to the market, where I was already known. I found, and greeted by name as I entered.

"I'll buy anything you'll sell me," said the proprietor, "and be glad to get it. Funny thing about this town, the way folks won't take the trouble to sell what they raise. Most of the big summer estates have their own gardens, of course, but there's nearly a hundred families that don't, and four boarding houses, and the hotels. Why, the hotels send to New York for vegetables—if you can beat that! Guess all the farmers with any gumption have gone to the cities."

"Well," said I, "I'm not farming for my health, which has always been good. I've got more than a bushel of peas out there."

"Peas!" cried the market man. "Why, I have more demands for peas than I can fill. The folks who could sell me peas won't plant 'em 'cause it's too much trouble or expense to provide the brush. I'll give you eight cents a quart for peas today."

"This is too easy," I whispered to Mike, as we went out to get the baskets.

I sold my rhubarb, also, and came away with a little book in which there was entered to my credit $4.16 for peas and $1.86 for rhubarb. I put the book proudly in my pocket, for it represented my first earnings from the farm, and, mounting the farm wagon again, told Mike to drive me to the hotel.

As we pulled up before the veranda, the line of old ladies in rockers to cursed their eyes upon us.

"Shure," whispered Mike, "they look like they was hung out to dry!"

I went up the steps and into the office, where the hotel proprietor snubly greeted me, asked after my health, and inquired how my "estate" was getting on.

"You mean my farm," said I. He smiled politely, but not without a skepticism which annoyed me. I hastened from him, and left my manuscript with the stenographer, who had arrived for the summer.

"I'll call for the copy tomorrow noon," said I. Then I went to the telegraph booth and sent a day letter to Stella. "Buster sending me to thank you," it read. "Meet me Hotel Belmont six tomorrow. Sold over a bushel of peas today. Prepare to celebrate."

"Mike," said I, returning to the cart, "drop me at the golf club. Tell Mrs. Pillig got to expect me to lunch."

It was ten o'clock when we arrived at the entrance to the club. I jumped out and Mike drove on. The professional took my name, and promised to hand it to the proper authorities as a candidate. Then I paid the fee for the day, borrowed some clubs from him, and we set out. I had not touched a club since the winter set in. How good the driver felt in my hand! How sweetly the ball flew from the club (as the golf ball advertisements phrase it), on the first attempt! I sprang down the course in pursuit, elated to see that I had driven even with the pro. Alas! my second shot was not like unto it! His second spun neatly up on the green and came to rest. Mine went off my mangle like a cannonball, and overshot into the road. My third went ten feet. But it was glorious. Why shouldn't a farmer play golf? Why shouldn't a golfer run a farm? Why shouldn't either write stories? Heavens, what a lot of pleasant things there are to do in the world, I thought to myself, as I finally reached the green and sank my put. Poor Stella, sweetener over a dictionary in New York! Soon she'd be here, too. She should learn to play golf, she should dig flower beds, she should wade in a brook. I fubbed my second drive.

"You're taking your eye off," said the pro.

"I'm taking my mind off," said I. "Give me a stroke a hole from here, for double the price of the round, or quits?"

"You're on," said he.

I stung him, too! I felt so elated that I went back to the hotel for an elaborate luncheon, and returned for eighteen holes more. The feats a man can perform the first day after he has had no sleep are astonishing. The second day it is different. In fact, I began to get groggy about the tenth hole that afternoon, so that the pro, got back his losses, as in a burst of bravado I had offered to double the morning bet. He came back with an unwholy 68 that afternoon, confounding him! They always do when the bet is big enough, which is really why they are called professionals.

"You Mean My Farm," I said.

That night I slept ten hours, worked over my manuscripts most of the next morning, packed a load of them in my suitcase, and after an early dinner got Peter to drive me to the train, for his school had now closed.

Rain, rain, nothing but rain! The weary traveler put his umbrella up for about the sixteenth time that day. He was getting very much annoyed, for, try as he might, he could not prevent the water from penetrating through his clothes.

He stopped at length in a doorway, hoping that very soon the rain would abate. He espied a man next to him, and turned for a chat.

"Beastly weather!" he remarked. "Beastly!" exclaimed the man, who was a resident of the town and who was just as displeased at the weather as the traveler. "Why, that ain't the word for it."

"Been raining here long?" ventured the traveler. "I can't say exactly," said the other. "You see, I've only lived here five years."

"Isn't our ice bill rather high, dear?" asked the young husband as he looked over the household accounts.

"I was just going to ask you about that, love," said the bride. "I can't understand it at all. I've been just as economical as I possibly could, sprouting record and, what is worse, but we never seem to have enough ice. Why, I've even left the icebox

PICK MINNESOTA TO TAKE "BIG 9" GRIDIRON HONOR

Wisconsin Believed Stronger Than Shown to Date But Not a Team That Can Beat Gophers.

Football experts who have watched the University of Minnesota eleven down its opponents thus far this season, agree that the Gophers have the brightest chance of getting away with the 1917 championship of the "Big Nine." Accordingly its game today with the State University of Iowa took first place in the interest of many true football fans.

The team, composed of strong, quick thinking players, works like a machine. Every game of the game has been mastered. The powerful back field is regarded as one of the strongest ever developed at Minnesota, which, for years, has turned out eleven of high scoring ability.

Minnesota has piled up a total of 169 points as against its opponents fourteen.

The game today with Iowa was the first start of the Gophers against a team which is believed to be stronger and speedier, entered the contest with only slight expectation of victory. The Hawkeyes hoped, however, to break up the Gophers' formations and hold them to a low score.

What Are Badgers? The clash between Wisconsin and Chicago at Madison was expected to go a long way towards revealing the home team's true strength. Wisconsin entered the game undefeated, fortified with new formations brought from the east, where most of the Badger coaching staff learned football. This game was Wisconsin's first in the "Big Nine" this season.

Stripped by a defeat by Northwestern a week ago, Coach Stang of the Chicago squad has drilled his players doggedly in perfecting new shift formations to be tried out against the Badgers.

Starting last Monday, the squad, through the stiffest kind of work every afternoon and even practiced at night under the glare of powerful arc lights.

Illinois, which received a setback from Ohio State a week ago, entered today's game with Purdue determined to re-establish itself in the Western conference race. As the Boiler-makers lost a one sided game to Iowa last Saturday, Coach Zuppke of the Illini was confident of a victory for his players.

East vs. West. Two inter-sectional games—the Michigan-Syracuse contest at Ann Arbor, and the Indiana-Purdue game at Indianapolis, were watched with keen interest. The Wolverines were expected to triumph over Syracuse, but Indiana had but little hope of stopping Purdue.

A hard held Princeton to a solitary field goal, thus keeping its goal line uncrossed by two of the most powerful teams in the country. The Eastern followers said they would be satisfied if their team scores.

The speedy Northwestern eleven, which surprised Western football followers by a victory over Chicago, took on Drake today at Evanston. The powerful attack of the Purple players was expected to bag them another victory. This game also had an inter-sectional flavor, inasmuch as Drake is a member of the Missouri Valley Conference.

Manager of Brooklyn Dodgers Began Baseball With Jawn McGraw and Hugh Jennings.

New York, Oct. 28.—Despite Brooklyn's defeat in the world series there is one man connected with the Dodgers who never will receive anything but praise for his share of the work that won the first National league pennant for Brooklyn since the American league got into the big league field.

Wilbert Robertson is his name, and like most fat men, he is loved everywhere—even in Manhattan, where they have little time for love or anything else.

Robertson is one of the few active baseball men left from the "good old days" of the Baltimore Orioles. Hugh Jennings and John McGraw are two others.

Robbie has had a long experience in baseball, beginning in Haverhill, Mass., way back in 1885. In that city he was the battery mate of John K. Tener, then a budding pitching star, and now president of the National league. Robbie went to the Athletics, then in the American Association, and became a member of the Orioles in 1904, when the American association club in Philadelphia ceased to exist.

In 1900 Robbie and McGraw went to St. Louis, but their sojourn there was brief. From St. Louis they went back to Baltimore, where, with Joe Kelley, they became owners of the Orioles franchise, which subsequently passed to New York and now is the property of the Ruppert-Huston duo. The two forfeited the franchise in 1902 and Robbie became manager of the Baltimore club in the Eastern, now the International league.

In 1904 Robbie decided he was tired of baseball, so he "retired" for just four years, returning to the game in 1908. He drifted back by practicing with the Orioles in the mornings, and would up by signing a contract to play with them. In 1909 John McGraw got Robbie's John Hancock to a Grant contract. He stayed in New York, catching Giant pitchers until 1914, when he went to Brooklyn to lead the Dodgers to victory.

CRONIN AND DALTON STARS IN 26-7 WIN

Tommy Runs Through Entire Cedar Falls Team for Touchdown on Kickoff Opening the Game.

Maurice Dalton and Tommy Cronin of this city, fullback and right half back of the Dubuque College eleven, are still living up to their records in the Iowa state conference. Yesterday the Dubuque Catholics journeyed to Cedar Falls and met the Iowa State Teachers. The result was a 27 to 7 victory for Captain Dalton's team.

Cronin brought the stands to their feet when the Teachers kicked to Dubuque on the opening whistle by dash through the entire Cedar Falls team for a touchdown. Following up their score, Dubuque amassed another seven points before the quarter was finished. Cronin crossed the goal line before the game ended, on a forward pass.

Dalton played a consistent game and pulverized the Teachers by dash. This is Muggsy's team's third victory of the season. The fourth game was a 6 to 6 tie with Creighton University last Saturday.

JANESVILLE LOSES TO EDGERTON, 98-0

Local Team Not in Same Class With Champions of Southern Wisconsin.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Edgerton, Oct. 28.—The Janesville Edgerton football game of 1916 is a thing of the past. Edgerton won by the overwhelming score of 98 to 0. The score, however, gives no indication of the plucky fight which was put up by the Janesville eleven. Janesville started the second half kicking the team representing Janesville high school. The Edgerton team has its work laid out for next week and will have to play the limit if it registers a victory when it meets the Stoutenough team here next Saturday.

Not all of the Janesville game was played by the Edgerton first team. Immediately following the opening of the second quarter with the score standing 26 to 0 against Janesville, the entire first team was taken out and the second team substituted. Using a shift formation taught by Coach Dexter, the second team played havoc with Janesville, scoring a touchdown in short order. The Edgerton team had games between teams of the second team representing Janesville for downs, then with their shift plays, Peters or Gunns carrying the ball, and a perfect interference of nine men quickly registers a second touchdown. The second team was then withdrawn and the first team sent in. Clarke, Ogdun, Rossebo and McIntosh began receiving either short or long forward passes thrown accurately and beautifully by Williams, displaying some open field running that ranks him as undoubtedly the best back in the state. The Edgerton team played nine different times he ran through the entire Janesville team for touchdowns. The blocking, tackling and interference of every Edgerton player was almost perfect. The shifts and plays taught by Coach Lameroux had the Janesville boys entirely bewildered, though Janesville played a good game. Clarke and Richards were the stars of the team, while every Janesville boy played the game every minute.

No time was taken out for injuries and no indication of anything but a hard work on the part of Coaches Lameroux and Dexter should place the team during the coming week in a condition such that the powerful Stoutenough eleven will find a worthy foe on Nov. 4th.

Fire completely destroyed the big barn on the Kaupinger farm north of the city, evening about 10 o'clock. Seventeen head of cattle were burned to death in the stanchions. The origin of the fire is unknown.

DAVE TIBBOTT'S TOE WILL BE BIG HELP TO PRINCETON TIGERS THIS FALL

Dave Tibbott.

Dave Tibbott did some great kicking for the Princeton Tigers last fall and he has already done a bit this season. A goal he kicked from the 46-yard line made the score that enabled Princeton to beat Tufts recently when no other score could be made. Kicking talent is valued more highly now than ever before and Princeton is fortunate in having such a star as Tibbott.

National next spring, is regarded by Manager Callahan as a real find. Dunlap played in a trolley league with St. James, Mo., last season and had a batting record of 500 per cent in fifty games. His record is filled with extra base hits.

Howard Drew, the "crack negro" sprinter, has left the University of Southern California and will matriculate at Drake University in Des Moines. Drew expects to be able to return to the track with this spring. Drew has fallen victim to the newspaper game, he admits, and expects to write his way through college. I have been offered a job on a newspaper at Des Moines, said Drew, and will attend the university. My contract with the paper is for three years, so I suppose that I will stay in college for three years, anyway. Drew said that his back would not permit him to play football this year, but that he would be able to sprint in the spring.

Robby Jones of Atlanta, whose playing was the sensation of the recent golf championship at the Merion club near Philadelphia, fired play the game at the age of seven. He is not fifteen years old.

In a recent billiard match in England between Newman and Falkner, the latter in five innings contributed breaks of 396, 142, 110, 192 and 259, an aggregate of 1,198 points and an average close to 240.

Jim Thorpe of Milwaukee is the leading base stealer of the American Association. Thorpe is to be given another chance by the New York Giants.

Billy Weston, son of Edward Payson Weston, arrived in San Francisco recently, having walked from Minneapolis. He said he walked the distance in three months and eighteen days. He started to walk there in six months and he will win $5,000 offered by the Minneapolis Athletic club, it is reported.

Among ball players, especially the Giants, Matty is often called "Commodore," and there is an interesting little story behind it. This year's strong Syracuse eleven and "Babe" Ruth of the Boston Red Sox are instances. Gehr, the New York A. C. high jumper and weight thrower, he called "Babe" despite the fact that he stands 6 feet 8 inches, and Shorty Des Jardien's 6 feet 8 inches of height and brawn will not be forgotten for a long time by athletes against whom he clashed when on University of Chicago teams.

Leaving it up to Young America, which would they rather have for a dad—Ty Cobb or Walt Johnson?
